THE BOOK

In 1930 the dashing Gino Watkins led a group of fourteen intrepid and largely inexperienced young men (including the author's father) to pioneer the first commercial air route between Europe and America. Alongside high adventure, triumph and tragedy, Scott paints a stunning portrait of two lost worlds – the Inuit hunters of the polar regions and the 'Brideshead' generation of English men addicted to adventure. One member of the expedition was stranded alone on the ice cap for five months, for much of the time in total darkness. Blizzards raged continuously and temperatures dropped to -41°C. For six weeks he was utterly trapped in an ice cave, unable to get out as his companions mounted a desperate, last-ditch rescue attempt.

Praise for Jeremy Scott's memoir, Fast and Louche:

'Mr Scott is a breath of shocking air in these dull times. Where has he been hiding?'
JOHN WALSH, INDEPENDENT

THE AUTHOR

Jeremy Scott was born into a family of dysfunctional risk-addicts. After a colourful career in one of London's top advertising agencies, described in his memoir Fast and Louche, he became a full-time writer.
